THIS is probably the most mixed-up issue of a magazine which you will ever receive. There are many reasons for this, but the chief one among them all is that the editor is probably the most mixed-up editor who ever took pen and type in hand.

To cite the reasons why you haven't received an issue of THE ALUMNAE NEWS since this time last year would entail itemizing every one of the day-to-day details of the Alumnae Office operation since this time last year.

It became more obvious day-by-day that we, the alumnae secretary/editor and the Alumnae Office staff, could not, to save our lives, keep-up with all of the things that we were supposed to. Decisions had to be made; demands had to be weighed. The result of the deciding and weighing proved, obviously enough, that many responsibilities were more pressing and immediate than our editing responsibility.

The editor (hereafter referred to as "I") would like for the magazine's readers to know that she didn't sit down one bright blue day last October and decide that there wouldn't be another issue of the NEWS until summer. Each day—each week—each month I kept thinking that there would be time to translate into ink and onto paper my mental plans for each of the three issues you've missed. Until the Alumnae Board met during Commencement weekend, I had planned to edit four issues this summer—to catch-up.

NO, the Board said to the four issues idea. And so at their direction we are publishing this one issue for the year. We hope that its giant proportions will make-up, in part at least, for our inabilities during the year.

We hope that there is HOPE for the future regularity of the magazine. The Alumnae Board and the College are in the process of employing someone whose primary responsibility will be to edit THE ALUMNAE NEWS. I will, indeed, share your joy in large measure when this employing is an accomplished fact.

I want to say a word or two further about the mixed-up-ness of this issue.

We have been saving material for Class News Notes all year. Before "we got the word" that we would publish only one issue, we had gotten a sizable batch of Notes set in type. We have culled and up-dated as best we could; for example, we have tried to precede birth announcements with wedding announcements. Some of the "news" isn't really news at all now—but a baby born last July, even though it is now a year old, is still something to crow about and make note of.

A further mix-up involves the College and its name. Today, as I write this, is Thursday; on next Monday, before I even have a chance to proof-read this type, the Woman's College becomes the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. Only on the cover (outside and in) have we taken note of the name-change. It will take considerable time and determination for us to switch from thinking of and talking about "The College" and "W. C." to thinking of and talking about "The University" and "U.N.C.G."

In the current state of mix-up, I hope that you will forgive this failure to convert in name as well as the year-long inability to edit.

The FIRST Ph.D.

THE FIRST doctor of philosophy degree to be earned at the Woman's College was awarded to Miss Nancy White at graduation exercises on June 2.

Nancy's specialization and research were in the major area of child development, and requirements for the degree were fulfilled in the College's School of Home Economics.

Her dissertation topic was "The Effectiveness of Purposive Teaching of Certain Reading Readiness Skills and Quantitative Concepts to Pre-School Children." Subjects for her research were the children enrolled in the College's Nursery School during the first semester of the 1962-63 session.

Nancy, who is the daughter of Mrs. Earle White of Statesville, was graduated from the Woman's College in 1946. For five years following her graduation she taught in the Salisbury City Schools. In 1951 she returned to teach in Curry School, the College's demonstration school, and in the School of Education. Her association with the School of Education continued until 1961 when she began her doctoral study as a teaching fellow in the School of Home Economics.

In 1955 she was awarded a master of education degree by the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

Nancy has accepted a position as assistant professor in the School of Home Economics for the 1963-64 session.

A member of Delta Kappa Gamma, which recognizes outstanding teachers and teaching, she has been actively associated with the Association for Childhood Education (ACE). From 1957 until 1959 she served as vice-president of the State ACE organization, and from 1959 until 1961 she was president of the Greensboro chapter.

It is interesting to note that Nancy's doctoral degree will remain unique in that it is the only such degree which will have been earned at the Woman's College, as such, because of the change in name of the College which will become effective on July 1, 1963.

The THIRD Honorary Degree to a Man

DR. PIERSON

THE THIRD honorary degree to be awarded by the Woman's College to a man was conferred on Dr. William Whatley Pierson, Jr., at graduation exercises on June 2.

Previously degrees have been conferred on Dr. Frank Porter Graham, formerly president of the University of North Carolina and United States senator and presently a United Nations mediator, and on the late Dr. Walter Clinton Jackson, third administrative head and first chancellor of the College.

Although for many years he has been associated with the University of North Carolina, Dr. Pierson's special association with the Woman's College was marked by his serving on two occasions within a five-year period as interim chancellor of the College. In 1956, following the resignation of Dr. Edward Kidder Graham, he served for one year; in 1960, following the resignation of Dr. Gordon Blackwell, he returned to serve for another year.

Chancellor Otis Singletary conferred the degree of Doctor of Letters on Dr. Pierson and read this citation:

WILLIAM WHATLEY PIERSON, JR. — dedicated teacher, meticulous scholar, wise administrator—has been a positive force in higher education in North Carolina for nearly half a century.

During a long and distinguished career at the University of North Carolina, he has served as Kenan Professor of History and Government, Head of the Department of Political Science and Dean of the Graduate School. In addition to these activities, he has somehow found the time to serve as Acting Director of the State Board of Higher Education and on two occasions in recent years, first in 1956-1957 and again in 1960-1961, he has served as Acting Chancellor of the Woman's College.

Dr. Pierson, for your unparalleled service to the cause of scholarship and higher education in your State and in your Region, and more particularly for your unique and valuable service to the Woman's College, by vote of the Faculty and that of the Trustees of the University of North Carolina, I confer upon you—as a symbol of the esteem, indeed, the affection we all feel for you—the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters with all its rights and privileges.

The FOURTH Alumnae Service Award

LUMNAE president Adelaide Holderness (left) presented to Miss Summerell the miniature tray which she will keep. The large tray on which each Alumnae Service Award recipient's name is engraved is kept in the Alumnae House.

TO ONE who has always met a teacher's greatest challenge—that of inspiring her students to the best that is in them—the Alumnae Service Award Committee and the Alumnae Board of Trustees consider it both a pleasure and a privilege to present the Fourth Alumnae Service Award, for the first time, to a former faculty member:

Jane Summerell

While serving realistically in the present, her deep respect for the past has never been lessened by her vision for the future. Whether in the role of student, teacher, or alumna, Miss Jane has never lost the warmth, the sensitivity, and the dignity that make her, first and last, a lady.

Her greatest contribution has been a life of service in the teaching profession. After graduation from the Woman's College in 1910, she taught in various high schools in the state and at Winthrop College before joining the Woman's College faculty in 1926. Her retirement in 1958 closed only the chapter of classroom instruction, for her influence as a stimulating and dedicated teacher persists daily in the lives and homes of thousands of her former students.

While on the faculty at the Woman's College, she served in many capacities. As Secretary of the Faculty Council, her delightful minutes enlivened otherwise dull sessions. On the Academic Board, she contributed a scholarly viewpoint. She served as President of the Phi Beta Kappa Chapter in 1944; as President of the Greensboro Branch of the American Association of University Women in 1934; and as adviser to Town Students for many years. She served as chairman of the faculty committee for the College's Fiftieth Anniversary observance, a five-year effort which culminated in an impressive celebration in 1942.

No other alumna of the Woman's College has a more continuous record of loyalty, devotion, and service than Miss Jane. She was President of the Alumnae Association in 1925-26 and a member of the Alumnae Board in 1960 and 1961, and she has been on Alumnae Advisory Committees through the years whenever her capable hand and head were needed. Her active membership included no refusal to serve when called upon by the College or Alumnae.

Audiences have enjoyed her innumerable appearances as a speaker at literary and educational meetings for many years. Now, even in retirement, she still does volunteer work for the North Carolina Children's Home Society and teaches a college class in Sunday School. She served in 1960-61 as the second president of the Friends of the Woman's College Library.

In honoring Miss Jane Summerell at this time, the Alumnae Association is also bringing honor to itself and to the Woman's College. This award warms the hearts of all of us who have loved her since student days as a dynamic teacher, a true friend, a wise counselor, an informed speaker, a talented author, a faithful and devoted alumna.

Today her quiet voice helps us to see more clearly, to support more generously, and to believe more proudly in the future of a great college.

The Vocation of the Scholar

Cornelius Kruse'

EVERYBODY KNOWS that, whatever some sectors of the public may think, colleges and universities exist for the central purpose of increasing and communicating and inspiring love for the knowledge that is appropriate to man at his best. To the outside world, colleges and universities are often more immediately known for their peripheral activities simply because activities, like plays and athletic events, lend themselves easily to outside exhibition. But the scholar at work, in the laboratory, in the library, or in his study, though engaged in an exciting discovery, offers no excitement or thrill to the onlooker who can only see books piled high and paper, the color of our spring daffodils written and unwritten upon, spread in great confusion around an earnest investigator absorbed in his or her work with little time nor, which is perhaps worse, present interest in the spectator. William James used to say that, unfortunately, no bell rings when truth has been attained. I have often thought, and sometimes expressed to my classes, how the community would sit up and take notice of us if bells did ring out when truth had been reached. What a joyful noise it would have made, say, in our Junior Honors Seminar if some Wednesday evening, perhaps at 9:25 P.M., chimes had rung out to proclaim to all of Greensboro the gladsome news that some members of the class had hit upon an important truth, e.g., that "man is neither an oyster nor a God." Windows would fly open, no doubt, cars would draw up to the curb and their drivers would look up to Melver and ask, consumed with interest and curiosity: "Qu'est-ce que c'est que ça?" Some Woman's College student in the know and standing nearby might reply, perhaps in a somewhat blasé way: "Oh, just another truth has been reached in the Junior Honors Seminar. They do that almost every Wednesday night." But alas! bells really do not ring.

Since ordinarily, then, not much public notice is given to students engaged in scholarly pursuit, and since we are gathered together for just this purpose, let us make the most of this our finest hour. This is, to use the well-known theme song of the Junior Show: "our once-a-year-show!" but let us this time observe it with that decorum that benefits scholars. But in being decorous let us not be solemn; after all, our chairman in issuing the invitation for this convocation expressed the hope that it would be "felicitous." May I express the same hope.

So let me begin by addressing you as "adulescentes doctissimae," most learned young women. "Scholastici in actu et in spe — in magna spe." The "magna" reminds me of what ex-President Taft, professor of constitutional law at Yale, used to tell us students. With his usual premonitory chuckle, natural to his large and jovial proportions, he would tell us that some students graduate "cum laude," some "magna cum laude," some few even "summa cum laude," but that many others unfortunately graduate "mirabile dictu." But I am addressing myself to all the "cum laudes," and on behalf of Woman's College I wish to congratulate you most sincerely upon your scholarly achievements of whatever nature, in whatever field, and in whatever class.

We are, then, assembled here to honor scholarship, and to speak in praise of it, as Socrates and his friends were assembled long ago in Ancient Greece to speak in praise of love. Here the analogy ends, for in that Platonic Symposium there was much eloquence on a high theme, produced in a sober interval between much "sympiein" which, as you know, literally means "drinking together," whether moderately or profusely. There will be none of this here, of course, but just the same, inspired, I hope by Socrates' spirit, I shall make an earnest attempt to speak in praise of scholarship and more particularly in praise of the vocation of the scholar.

The very term, as every scholar knows, is derived from the Greek word "scholé" meaning "leisure." That is to say, without leisure, no scholarship. We philosophers like to distinguish between necessary and sufficient conditions. Leisure by itself, as we all know, is not yet a guarantee of scholarship. In fact, some of the meanings of the very word scholé are themselves rather disturbing. The great standard authority, Liddell and Scott's Greek English Lexicon, informs us that when the dative of "scholé" is used as an adverb, i.e., qualifies the scholar's behavior, it may mean "in a leisurely way, slowly, late, or even scarcely at all." But these collateral meanings have, of course, by now been purged away by reason of the actual uses to which a great succession of scholars have put their leisure. The scholar, then, to begin with, is recognized by what he does with his leisure.

The scholar's vocation, or his life, first of all, is a dedicated life. The scholar believes that there is such a thing as Truth, in all fields of human interest and concern, and that it may be discovered, if rightly sought. This faith would seem simple and general enough to win universal acceptance. But even in Plato's days, Socrates warned his listeners against the temptation of becoming "misologists," that is, haters of ideas who upon discovering that what was once believed to be true turned out to be false, may come to lose all faith in any truth; much as persons once deceived by a trusted friend may henceforth distrust all men indiscriminately. Even in philosophy, I regret to say, there is today a tendency in some quarters to narrow Truth's domain drastically, to exclude, for example the realms of value, including that of ethical and esthetic truth. Surely this is, as one of my revered philosophical friends, William Pepperell Montague, once called it, "a modern distemper." I am sure, such is my faith in the health of man, that sooner or later there will be a recovery from it. Distempers, when overcome, make us value health all the more, and so this challenge to Truth may bring us to understand and value it more than ever before when perhaps we took it too much for granted.

In any case, since without Truth there can be no scholarship, the scholar's life is dedicated to the discovery of Truth, and I could add, to the achievement of wisdom, or to the acquisition of that knowledge which is also virtue and of that virtue which is also knowledge. Why does man want to know? Cannot he live and get along without it? Perhaps he can, up to a point, but only by ceasing to be a man, a man with his full range of potentialities. Man, at his best, is a philosopher, a lover of wisdom, and love of wisdom, according to Aristotle, "the master of those who know," begins in wonder. It may well be that we are, as some modern existentialists would say: "In die Welt hineingeworfen," cast into the world. Undoubtedly, we find ourselves in a world we never made, but as human beings we are also endowed with a potentiality of reflectiveness so that, once here, we cannot help but exclaim: "Teins! Teins! Teins! Where are we? Who are we? Who are these others who look like ourselves? What is it that surrounds us?" Some degrees of knowledge—the knowledge that is for utility, could not wait until material wants were supplied, but as soon as man attained a little leisure for reflectiveness he could encompass a much wider range of interest. Man, it is true, always has to keep his feet on the ground, but his eyes may survey the world. Man has many urgent impulses and desires and the impulse to know must learn to live with the rest, but surely Socrates was right in proclaiming, and it has become the scholar's first axiom, that "the unexamined life is not worth living." Aristotle, in the ancient world, was surely also right in ascribing divinity to man's mind, as was Pascal, who knew so well both man's "grandeur" and his "misère" in finding in man's thought the source of his dignity and grandeur. Members of the Junior Honors Seminar will remember Pascal's great declaration:

"Ainsi toute notre dignité consiste dans la pensée . . . Travaillons donc à bien penser. Voila le principe de la morale."

The scholar's life is, then, I repeat, a dedicated life: dedicated to the proposition that Truth will make man free, Truth in its manifold revelation in all fields of human interest and concern, in Science, in Philosophy, in Art, in human relations, and in Religion. There is, to adapt Terence's celebrated expression, nothing human that is alien to the concern of the scholar. The scholar fervently believes that knowledge of the Truth that is also Beauty will make men free from their first impulses, and sometimes all-to-imperative and tyrannical impulses, free also from external authority, free, in short, to live as men. But this dedication to the Truth that will make men free has as its counterpart that freedom is a necessity for Truth. Truth and freedom, as we have learned in recent years with a new poignancy, dare not be separated, and they are happy only when they walk together hand in hand in search of new and richer meanings in life.

Since the unexamined life is not worth living, but life is breathtakingly short and since what needs to be examined for a richer and more abundant life is never-ending, man needs the company of like-minded dedicated scholars living with him during his span of life and succeeding him in generations to come. This need for mutual support and encouragement, along with the necessity of providing for the unbroken continuance of the scholarly enterprise, is, of course, the basic reason why we form universities, where, no matter what field of knowledge may attract us as of special interest to us, young and old, teachers and students, we carry on our work together in mutual helpfulness. It would be a sad day if scholars in their diverse fields would no longer feel the great enhancement of spirit which comes from a joyous companionship in scholarly work, performed together. A few years ago at a similar convocation held at Wesleyan, President Conant, then still president of Harvard, told us that one of his great concerns was to try to educate experts or scholars to understand each other enough to be able to communicate with each other. This was before C. P. Snow had made the lack of communications between scientists and humanists his central concern and publicized this fact in his writings and addresses. It would indeed be sad if the possibility of communication between scholars ceased; because, as Professor Whitehead has reminded us "overspecialization means the trivialization of knowledge."

One of the great joys of a residential college is, or should be, that the unity of spirit in a diversity of fields represented is here more easily maintained. It is a precious experience which students and professors should seek to foster among themselves, perhaps even more than is now done. In my graduate student days at Yale, in organizing our table companions for the year, in the Yale Dining Commons, we deliberately sought out representatives from diversified fields so that we could educate each other, at least to the point of being able to ask intelligent questions of each other and to understand the answers to them. When I tell you that my tablemates were Reinhold Niebuhr; Dumas Malone, our great expert on Thomas Jefferson; Ralph Gabriel, Yale's great professor of American intellectual history; Roland Bainton, Titus Street Professor of Ecclesiastical History and great biographer of Martin Luther; Robert Calhoun, now Sterling Professor of Historical Theology at Yale, you will readily see what I mean and what I owe to them as my informal educators. There were in addition students of law and medicine in our group. One man's shop was the other man's liberal education. Later I was so interested to hear that Whitehead had used a similar device. He wrote that during his three undergraduate years in Trinity College, Cambridge, all his lectures were on mathematics. "But the lectures," he added, "were only one side of education. The missing portions were supplied by incessant conversation, with one's friends, undergraduates, or members of the staff. This started with dinner at about six or seven, and went on till about ten o'clock in the evening. This experience led to a large amount of miscellaneous reading . . . for example, by the end of my undergraduate education, I knew by heart parts of Kant's Critique of Pure Reason."

"Free discussion among friends," Whitehead concludes, "was a wonderful influence on my education." I am sure that in every possible way we should foster at Woman's College a similar comradeship and mutual communication among scholars, students, and faculty, representing a great variety of different fields. A philosopher might say, for example, to a mathematician: "Look, if you will explain to me your mathematical absolute, cabined, cribbed, and confined, as it seems to me, between upright parallel bars, I'll explain to you the philosophical absolute of Fichte, Schelling, or Hegel. OK?" Unfortunately, we often hesitate to make such a proposal, but would it not greatly contribute to understanding and intercommunication if we did?

It is said that, in our day, the intellectual, i.e., the scholar, is under critical attack. I have heard that a famous columnist remarked during an earlier election than the last that a certain candidate for the presidency, still much in the public press in our own day, "had all the egg-heads for him," but that, unfortunately, there were not enough of them to elect him. I have also heard people say we were living in an age of anti-intellectualism. Far be it from me to know how candidates for the presidential office can be and are elected whether, for example, it is better for them to be married, once, twice, or not at all; but it has always been hard for me to believe that we are really living in a world that has turned its back upon man's intellect or reason. On the contrary, the world over, I sense, and UNESCO corroborates, a pervasive desire to learn, to know, to enter upon that emancipation that knowledge brings. Surely, whenever and wherever there seems to be a revolt against reason or fear of it, it must rest upon a grave misunderstanding of the nature and function of reason. Reason, as John Locke so eloquently said, is "the little candle of the Lord" which man would extinguish only at his own peril, in fact, at nothing less than the peril and cost of abdicating his humanity. It was, I must admit, at once heartening but also a little sad that, now some few years ago, in June, 1953, our then President Eisenhower had to enjoin the Dartmouth students "not to join the bookburners," or that the late President of Yale, Dr. A. Whitney Griswold, felt constrained to say in the McCarthy days,

"Books won't stay banned. They won't burn. Ideas won't go to jail. In the long run, the censor and inquisitor have always lost. The only cure for bad ideas is better ideas."

Maybe, for a moment, we were in greater peril than we thought, and one must recognize that there are still forces at work even today, mainly animated by fear, that would persuade us that it is dangerous to examine life, especially as manifested in some wide open spaces. But all scholars must now rejoice and take new heart in realizing that, in a few short years, this climate of fear has largely given way to one of greater trust. Perhaps the greatest testimony to a return to a belief in Truth as a power that, like love, can cast out fear, was the conference of scholar-scientists that, called originally by President Eisenhower, took place in Geneva a few years ago and which was attended by hundreds of representatives from 72 nations. Scholars in the United States alone offered to the American Selecting Committee more than 1000 papers of which, I am told, 525 were finally chosen for presentation. The response from other countries, including Soviet Russia, was in similar proportion. The dark clouds of secrecy, suspicion, and fear that had been building themselves up to portentous shapes in the previous years, were at least for a time dispersed like mist before the sun: and abundant information was freely given and taken, surely to the joy of all scholars. It was evident to all scholars who read about this event, which frequently was called a "miracle" by commentators, that scholars rejoiced in being able to exhibit themselves as they truly are when unfettered, as eager to receive as to give, to learn as to impart knowledge.

This experience, of course, highlights another aspect of the vocation of the scholar: along with his dedication to the Truth must go his readiness to stand up and be counted for it. As Socrates knew, the virtues of courage and high hope must be conjoined with the steady examination of life. I believe with Milton, Spinoza, John Stuart Mill, Judge Learned Hand, President Griswold, and many others that Truth will, in the end, prevail, but truth-bearers, i.e., scholars, must actively undertake this crusade on Truth's behalf. The great Italian humanist, Benedetto Croce, told us at Oxford in 1930, on the occasion of an international conference of philosophy, when he himself was living under the authoritarian and totalitarian Fascist regime, that philosophy in Italy had then not much chance to be heard, but with great wistfulness and poignancy he asked: "What would silk worms do if silk were no longer prized?" Croce, by his scholarly resistance to totalitarian attempts at "Gleichschaltung," gave as a heartening example of the scholar's courage.

The scholar, in other words, cannot live in an ivory tower of detachment. He is not simply Browning's "grammarian" who to the end of his life preferred knowledge to life. He is a part of his contemporary world, as Socrates was of his. The scholar is, then, also a citizen, a citizen of his town, his state, his country, and he is a citizen of the world. The great German writer Thomas Mann, in his day, was to discover this and did before it was too late so that before he died he was honored for his splendid championship of the cause of freedom. It is not generally known, however, that, in the first world war, he wrote a book, to my knowledge never translated, and in later German editions much mitigated, entitled: Die Betrachtungen eines Unpolitischen, the Observations of an Unpolitical Person. In it he set forth his conviction that the artist or scholar should not concern himself with political matters or affairs of state, but need only in time of war respond to his country's call for its defense. When quite a number of years later, in fact in February 1938, we had at Wesleyan University the great honor and delight of having Thomas Mann on the campus over a weekend, I, being then much younger, was impertinent enough to ask him whether he still believed what he had then written. His response was prompt and reassuring: "Ach nein!" he answered, "die Nazis haben mich eines Besseren belehrt" — "Oh, no! the Nazis taught me how wrong I had been!"

I should now also like to make a plea for the recognition of the scholar who is also something else besides, who combines scholarship with business or a profession or with home-making. It might seem as if a scholar could only be one who devotes his entire time to scholarship, to whom society gives complete leisure so that he may in turn serve society through his scholarship. This is the pattern we as teachers are most accustomed to. But the amateur scholar has been present in all times and places. After all, some leisure all people possess and to an increasing degree, and this leisure might well be devoted to scholarly ends. I have a feeling that when our republic was younger and we were not yet addicted to the radio and television and mounds of newspapers, we had more scholars who were also lawyers, doctors, journalists, statesmen, like Thomas Jefferson and Benjamin Franklin and many others. In England this tradition still persists. I know that in Latin America, too, one is very apt to find a business man who is also a very learned scholar. I was told, while on various extensive philosophical missions in Latin America, that the best libraries in many countries were owned by private business men. In Buenos Aires, for example, the owner of the leading department store was reputed also to have the best private library. I was also told that in the Argentine the first Spanish translation of Kant's Critique of Pure Reason became quickly a best-seller and was sold in the newspaper kiosks, in the subway, and on street corners. Similarly in this country there are at least some scholars who are not professionals. I am thinking of a man like Arthur Houghton, president of the Steuben Glass Company, and at the same time a devoted humanist, who has recently organized with the collaboration of the Poetry Society of America and eminent American Poets the unique exhibition in New York of "Poetry in Crystal," and who for years has been in close touch with and a supporter of the American Council of Learned Societies. You surely must know about our insurance tycoon in Connecticut's capital, in Hartford, Wallace Stevens who, when he died recently at the age of 75, was acclaimed "as the most finished poet of his age." I am also thinking of Huntington Cairns, treasurer of the National Gallery in Washington, whose books in the field of art and philosophy have set a high standard of scholarship.

What is true for men is certainly also true for women. All my students know that first, last, and all the time, I extol my great master Plato, and that, more particularly, I heartily subscribe to his conviction, based on penetrating insight, that there is no more stupid way of dividing mankind when it comes to considerations of intellectual endowment, than to classify them as male and female. This was in Plato's day a revolutionary objective and it has remained so even with us until recently. Of course, not all foci of the equality of women with men were as rough and outspoken as the crabbed old bachelor in George Eliot's now forgotten novel Adam Bede, who exploded to say: "I tell you there isn't anything under the sun that needs to be done at all but what a man can do better than women, unless it's bearing children, and they do that in a poor makeshift sort of way." Plato, too, recognized that women are different from men, but declared firmly that when it comes to education and intellectual achievement this is not a difference that makes a difference. Consequently, women were to receive the same education as men; and high causes were to be as open to them as to men. It is true that in modern times, and contrary to Plato who was ready to sacrifice the family in order to make the family spirit prevail in the state, we do recognize the great claims of the family. But your great founder thought this fact was an additional reason for educating women. One of the most striking new developments within the last few years has been the recognition that in rearing a family a woman, after the initial years, once more possesses leisure—and leisure, scholé, as we saw, can make the scholar. "The New York Times" on Sunday, May 5, devoted a whole section to the new trends at Radcliffe, Sarah Lawrence, Wellesley, Vassar, Smith, the University of Minnesota, and other institutions, whereby it would be possible for women, after the family has been established, to pursue scholarly activities. University people often ask, "What happens to our scholars when they graduate? They somehow seem to get lost." Universities and colleges, in general, and not only a handful of them, but colleges everywhere ought to facilitate the continuance of scholarship even beyond graduation and the training of higher degrees. May I make a strong plea here, while we are honoring scholarship, whether you are going to be professional or amateur scholars, Carry on! Carry on in the knowledge that the avenues of scholarship will be open to you beyond college as now!

In conclusion and summing up, may I say scholarship deserves its praise because it enables men and women to discover themselves and what constitutes their true grandeur in a universe that with every advance in knowledge is becoming more and more mysterious. In that discovery of self and devotion to its highest ends, ends that transcend our little days and endow them with the brightness of enduring meaningfulness, we may find how true is the judgment of the Greek poet Menander when he exclaimed: How excellent, how amiable, how wonderful is man when he is really man!

A distinguished American philosopher, Dr. CORNELIUS KRUSÉ was Visiting Professor of Philosophy and director of the Junior Honors Seminar at the Woman's College during the 1962-63 session.

He was a member of the faculty of Wesleyan University in Connecticut from 1923 until his retirement a year ago, and he served as chairman of the Department of Philosophy from 1930. In 1942-43 he was a visiting professor at Yale University from which institution he received the bachelor of divinity, master of arts, and doctor of philosophy degrees.

Among other distinguished positions Dr. Krusé has served as executive director and chairman of the Board of Directors of the American Council of Learned Societies; as chairman of the First Inter-American Congress of Philosophy; as vice-president on two occasions of the International Congress of Philosophy; as president of the First Congress Inter-American Philosophical Society. He was chairman of the Committee on International Cultural Relations from 1948 through 1959. Twice he has served as a United States Specialist for the Educational Exchange Program to Latin America and as a member of the Executive Board of the Friends Service Committee. In 1943 he was a member of a Cultural Mission to Latin America.

Dr. Krusé has turned his year of teaching at the Woman's College "a new and unexpectedly rewarding experience." For the first time in his long years of teaching he had women as students. In September he was not quite certain what level of scholarship to expect; but at the end of the year he was enthusiastic about what the students had demonstrated. "I'd be willing to let my juniors stand up against all scholastic challengers. They are very good indeed."

The standing ovation by the students following the Honors Day address, which is printed here, left no doubt but that student appreciation of Dr. Krusé is as great as his praise of them has been.

LINSKI COLLECTIONS

THE FRIENDS OF THE WOMAN'S COLLEGE LIBRARY published during the spring a booklet entitled LOIS LINSKI: AN APPRECIATION, copies of which were given as keepsakes at the fourth anniversary dinner of the Friends in mid-April. The illustrations which follow and accompany the text of Doris Betts' speech for the Friends' dinner are among the many which Miss Lenski has drawn for her books for children. These particular ones are among those used in the "Appreciation."

Miss Lenski, upon whom the Woman's College conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Humane Letters in 1962, has presented to the College two distinct collections: the Lois Lenski Collection of her own works, numbering 225 books with manuscripts, original drawings, and related materials; in addition; and the Lois Lenski Collection of Early American Children's Books, numbering 700 pieces and including early picture books, ABC's, and editions of Mother Goose.

PERHAPS SOME OF YOU have seen the small signs posted in libraries which say, "Only low talk permitted here." I thought Mr. Adams (Woman's College librarian) might have had that in mind when he invited me to share this occasion with you, for I am not a scholar or professor like some of your previous speakers, nor am I that unsung hero — the librarian. (The occasion was the fourth anniversary dinner of the Friends of the Library.) I do have some connection with libraries in that I represent that group of any library's best customers, the card-carrying omnivorous readers; I do most of my writing in libraries because they are quiet, and some of it for libraries, hoping they will circulate the books. Recently, too, I've been serving on the board of trustees of our library in Lee County, and, have come to understand exactly what is needed to have a good library. Crass as it sounds, the need is Money. There is never enough, not from taxes or gifts or foundations. And as sure as it's time to replace the out-of-date encyclopedia, you may depend on an urgent leak developing in the roof.

Groups such as yours are a wonderful help to any library, because your friendship includes not only the heart but the pocketbook — and roof repairs and new reference works are still sold for cash and not for loyalty. You supplement the bread-and-butter funds; you are alert to the specialized needs and the unique purchase. And the contribution you make to the more than 3,000 students here but becomes a CARE package of the mind — who knows what ideas and thoughts may be carried from this library into a thousand other communities to nourish minds you do not even dream about?

You remember that even the city of Nineveh, to which God kept sending Jonah via whales to warn of destruction, had a public library of some 10,000 works and documents in cuneiform characters on tablets of clay. I do not claim here that Nineveh was spared because God reasoned that No-City-Which-Has-A-Library-Can-Be-All-Bad, but if only ten righteous men would have been enough to save Sodom and Gomorrah, who can tell? Ten ex-librarians in Nineveh with the patience and devotion the underpaid job requires might well have been enough to tip the scales.

But stop there: For this will not be a talk on the proud history of libraries and books and readers. The theme I would like to emphasize is not the fine records of libraries, but their challenge, not their history but their purpose. Although it is often called "the diary of the human race," a library should not only preserve thought but stimulate thought. It should be, not a quiet pool, but a wellspring.

And I say this to you because Friends of the Library groups naturally find that one of their main roles is to help preserve. They must not forget also to instigate, and to stimulate.

I have had a long love affair with libraries in North Carolina cities. It has also been, in some ways, a long war. I have spent 60 per cent of my time using what the library offered and perhaps 40 per cent trying to obtain permission to use something else which had been enshrined away. That which is precious in books is what they have to say, what they can set ringing in the mind. The rest is paper and glue and string and a little ink.

This balance between use-and-restriction probably begins first of all as a part of the biography of every book-loving child who has ever lived. Soon he has read most of the books "set aside" for children, and his eyes are already greedy for the adult section. In the town where I grew up, our librarians served as self-appointed censors: This book was good for you, like a pill; and this one, like a green apple, would produce mental indigestion. And no one under 12, no matter what he had already read or was capable of reading, could move from the children's room to the adult section — not even if that "adult" section was full of light-romance written in 10-year-old vocabulary.

I soon learned that a child who went through the employee bathroom and out the second door could get into the adult section unseen, and read everything from Freud to Erskine Caldwell and from Edgar Rice Burroughs to Margaret Mead — and take the nourishment with the indigestion. The last time I was home in Statesville, I spied a boy coming through the same bathroom door. He had a book by Joseph Conrad, a murder mystery by Raymond Chandler and a book on the techniques of natural childbirth. I imagine he will be able to survive the combination. He may even, some day, decide that Conrad wears better than Chandler and have some ideas about why.

It is perhaps this diversity of subject matter and ideas available in a library which makes the whole task of the censor so foolish. In a dictatorship, the books are rewritten to coincide with the newest trend; history is altered to fit hindsight. But in our libraries, one may still read an explanation of how the sun revolves around the earth, or study the views of Adolph Hitler, or follow the justifications and defenses of human slavery. Ideas which have been rejected, even disproved, remain in our libraries, because it is basic to the idea of a library that man has a right to re-examine his past, to reconsider his mistakes as well as his achievements. Even his aberrations and lunacies are there for consideration. Where is a book-burner to get so much as a toe hold on a single shelf of all this variety? Where shall he begin his burning? It is all there, the good and the bad, just the way all your memories wait for you inside your skull.

Besides being an occasional censor, our librarian also used to frown on checking out too many books. It was as if she felt it was all right to read, but there was no need to be a pig about it.

Of course, now that I know more about vandalism and lost and overdue books, I see a minimum merit in her view; but I have not forgotten that feeling of being shut out from what I, myself, wanted to read right now. This feeling still returns in the presence of rare book rooms, and volumes put securely into wire cages behind locked doors. It all reminds me of G. K. Chesterton, who was once taken to see the spectacle of Broadway with its blazing lights and neon advertising signs. He said, "How beautiful! How beautiful it would be for some one who could not read!"

Sometimes our book collections would be especially beautiful to the illiterate; we collect the right books for the wrong reasons, primarily for their date or their binding or their singularity, or their cost, but not to read them. And with the natural desire to excel in this field, to have the only copy of this or the oldest copy of that, we make for ourselves less of a library and more of a museum.

Let me say that, of course it is part of the function of a college library to serve scholar and researcher as well as that reader who is so hooked he cannot let a single cereal box go by without studying the ingredients. A university library does accumulate the rare and the unusual, and it wants them kept in good condition. But writers like myself draw back a little from the book that is behind bars, the way a musician likes a piano kept open and in tune, or gardeners set daffodil bulbs where they will get both sun and the appreciation of strangers.

Apart from their rarity or cost, certain books are beautiful in themselves, because of their engravings or paper or special craftsmanship—a beauty put upon pages for the benefit of eyes and senses. Once H. Allen Smith, tired of the hightoned notes at the end of books about the "whatchamacallit typeface" and the "whichever grade of paper," inserted a publisher's note of his own on the last page of one of his works. It read: "The paper on which this book was printed was made out of trees. Real trees."

And of course it's an old claim in Chapel Hill that Thomas Wolfe used to write his college themes and short stories on toilet paper — which I fully expect some library to dredge up someday and preserve in glassine envelopes, carefully indexed.

It's hard for writers to get excited about that kind of library. A writer entering any library for the first time peers carefully around to make certain he is unobserved, then heads straight for the alphabetical section appropriation for his surname to see if he is represented. Nothing delights home more than to find his book dog-eared, worn and much handled. "Why, looky there, it's already ruined!" he thinks, and it isn't entirely from glee that the library must now buy a new copy, although he could use the royalties. It's from the knowledge his words have not stayed there on that page like so many unsprouted seeds: they have been read. Perhaps by someone who did not even like them — but they have been READ.

And those readers are his next concern. The visiting writer turns the book over to slide the card from the back envelope and read the names of those who have signed out his book. Lovely people, all of them, with immaculate taste! If the library does not use a signout system, he can only frown over the record of dates stamped on the card, and wonder why he was so neglected from May, 1960 to February, 1961.

Writers want books — all books — to be accessible and to be valued for what is inside them. This does not mean that all books will circulate widely or have broad popular appeal. It certainly does not mean that a library should only stock popular books, or that all knowledge should be condensed from its primary sources to some simple and palatable form. The originals — even if sometimes they must be kept in wire cages — may yield, to a trained scholar, information which up to now has been missed or ignored or misinterpreted.

Some of you may remember in World War II the paper-bound books which the U. S. Army sent to soldiers serving overseas. All the major book publishers were anxious to have their new offerings chosen to be used in this series. During the 40's, Simon & Schuster published a book called "The Ten Commandments," but the Army's selection group felt it was too long for their paperback format. One ambitious editor from the firm said quickly, "How about using only five of them and calling it 'A Treasury of the World's Best Commandments?'"

I don't recommend such condensing from primary sources — in fact, if the Woman's College Library had on hand the unbroken tablets off Mount Sinai on which the Decalogue was first writ, I'd be the first to suggest they be stored with some care.

But in the effort to fulfill a library's need for the rare, the unusual, the regional, the nearly extinct, the collector's item, it would be a shame if we failed to remember that books are to be read, experiments to try, thoughts to think — and libraries are to use and grow on, not just to enshrine.

George Bernard Shaw was once browsing around in a second-hand bookstore when he came across a volume of his own plays, marked down on the bargain counter to a shamefully low price. The book had previously been inscribed on the flyleaf by Shaw himself to a good friend of his, and signed, "With the compliments of George Bernard Shaw." Shaw was so provoked that his friend had disposed of the book that he bought it himself and sent it straight back to the same friend with a second inscription which read, "With RENEWED compliments, G. B. Shaw."

What writer wouldn't sympathize? And yet, I think he was wrong. Left alone, that book might have been purchased by a stranger who had yet to hear of "Man and Superman," the book might have gone on being lent to friends and relatives in a long chain of new readers and critics and disciples. That's what books are FOR. That would have been a real renewing. That's why they are written.

DORIS WAUGH BETTS was an apt choice of the Friends of the Woman's College Library for the organization's fourth annual dinner speaker in mid-April.

"Neither college work, marriage, motherhood, nor fulltime jobs have been able to keep Doris Waugh Betts from creative writing. Nor has writing lowered the standard of her achievement as a student, a wife, a mother, a job holder."

Doris Waugh came from Statesville to the Woman's College as a student in the fall of 1950. Here she wrote her first fiction and worked in the News Bureau and did an assortment of other self-help jobs on campus and in Greensboro and at the end of her sophomore year had the highest academic average in her class and received the Phi Beta Kappa award.

At the end of that year she married Lowry Betts, who was studying philosophy and art at the University of South Carolina in Columbia. She returned to the Woman's College for the first semester of her junior year but then left to join her husband in Columbia. There her first child, daughter LewEllyn, was born, and there the new mother was when she learned that she had won MADENOLSELLE magazine's fiction prize for collegians for her story "Mr. Shawn and Father Scott."

After his graduation from USC, Lowry entered law school at the University of North Carolina, and the family moved to Chapel Hill. Doris worked fulltime for an advertising firm. That fall she won Putnam publishers' $2000 book length fiction prize for her collection of stories "The Gentle Insurrection." This money helped finance second child, son David, born a year later.

In the meantime she completed six more hours toward her degree and worked on her first novel "Tall Houses in Winter" which was published by Putnam in 1956 and which, in 1957, was awarded the Sir Walter Raleigh Cup which is given annually by the Historical Book Club of North Carolina for the best work of fiction written by a North Carolinian.

When Lowry finished law school, the move was to Sanford. A third child, Erskine, was born in 1961; Doris worked full-time for the Sanford Daily Herald for two years. A Guggenheim grant freed her for a creative year. She produced another collection of stories which has been sold to a publisher, and she began her second novel "I, Thomas Allen" on which she continues to work as she rears her children, works actively for the Democratic Party, makes speeches, judges creative writing contests, reviews books, writes for newspapers, et cetera.

new members

The first order of business at the Commencement Meeting of the Association was the taking-into-membership of the Class of 1963. As is the tradition, the everlasting officers represented their 450-plus classmates. Elizabeth (Martin) Shaw '57, chairman of the Undergraduate Relations Committee, introduced the officers: Carole Slaughtor of Charlotte, president; Carol Furey of Asheville, vice-president; Sue Rice of Hanover, Pennsylvania, secretary; Joy Joiner of Reidsville, treasurer, and Dot Davis of Greenville, alumnae representative. (Dot is the daughter of Mary Bailey (Williams) Davis '33 and the granddaughter of the late Lillie (Boney) Williams '98.)

new giving program

As the spring mailings on behalf of the Alumnae Annual Giving Program indicated, the By-Laws revisions which were necessary before such a program could be instituted were accepted by the members of the Alumnae Association voting at the Midwinter Meeting on December 1. All alumnae-giving contributions are now channeled through the College's Office of Development rather than through the Alumnae Office. The expense of operating the Alumnae Office and Program and Association is, in return, financed by the Annual Giving Program.

The Alumnae Scholars Program has moved into a second year. Authorized by the Alumnae Annual Giving Council, this year's Alumnae Scholars Committee, of which Miriam (Goodrum) Tuttle '38 served as chairman, selected from among some 175 applicants four new Scholars who will be in next year's freshman class.

The new recipients are: Wanda Holloway of Monroe, Janet Hunter of Winston-Salem, Linda Lockhart of Oreland, Pennsylvania, and Judy McDonald of Jacksonville. (Janet is the daughter of Annie Hill (Alspaugh) Hunter '37C, and Linda is the daughter of Sara (Joyner) Lockhart '40.)

new officers

When votes were counted in late May, the following were elected as new officers for the Alumnae Association.

Jane (Linville) Joyner '46 of Chapel Hill will become president of the Association following the Midwinter Meeting, succeeding Adelaide (Fortune) Holderness '34.

The other officers elected to serve terms concurrent with Jane's are: Mary Dale (Shue) Johnson '59 of Burlington, second vice-president; and Billie (Upchurch) Miller '44 of Asheboro, recording secretary.

Members of the Alumnae Board of Trustees elected on the same ballot are: Doris (Huffines) Bernhardt '52 of Greensboro, Susan (Green) Finch '18 of Thomasville, Helen (Lichtenfels) Gumpert '33 of Asheville, and Neill McLeod '57 of Raleigh.

The Alumnae Annual Giving Program report, which is included in this issue of the NEWS, speaks eloquently for itself. This year's contribution of $52,-801.84, as compared with the $13,-154.09 which we gave during 1962, certainly proves that we needed the persistent and convincing persuasion which the Office of Development has provided. Major credit is due the 176 Class Agents who added their personal time and notes to the mailing in the early spring and to the area committees which promoted personal solicitation in certain designated cities and areas.

In the fall information will be available from the Annual Giving Council as to the expenditure of the funds received.

On the basis of their first semester's achievements, the four Scholars who were freshmen at the College during the just-concluded session were granted Alumnae Scholarships for another year by the Alumnae Scholars Committee.

In the fall the Alumnae Scholars on campus will number eight. This number will indicate half-way progress in the Alumnae Scholars Program. The ultimate goal is a complement of sixteen Alumnae Scholars on campus at all times, four in each academic class with each Scholar receiving $500 to help with the financing of each of her four years.

MRS. WIRTH

A Bequest, A Memorial, & A Promise

THREE ALUMNAE, two who may be named and one who must be unnamed for the time being, have figured influentially during the past year in the life and future of the Woman's College and its students. One of the alumnae, the late Nettie Leete (Parker) Wirth '03, included the College, through the Alumnae Association, in her will. The children of the second alumna, the late Katharine (Smith) Reynolds of the Class of '01, established a scholarship program in memory of their mother. And the third wrote a letter.

In her last will and testament Mrs. Albert Carl Wirth, Sr., made a bequest to the Alumnae Association "to be placed as a fund for helping a worthy young woman of North Carolina who plans to attend or is attending Woman's College."

The money, so willed, was given by the Board of Trustees of the Alumnae Association last fall to a student who was entering the College as a freshman. The money helped the College assure this young woman her first year of college. The value of Mrs. Wirth's bequest, though the money is now spent, will be everlasting because of its translation into the life of "a worthy young woman."

Mrs. Wirth, who died in March 1961, was the Chief Marshal of her class of 1903, and at the fiftieth reunion of the class she was appointed as the group's everlasting president.

She remained at the College following her graduation and until 1918 she taught mathematics. In that year she married Mr. Wirth, an architect, and to them, in time, two children were born: a daughter, Antoinette, who is now Mrs. Robert McLean Whittet, Jr., of Richmond, Virginia; and a son, Albert Carl, Jr., now a structural steel engineer of Raleigh.

After the death of her husband in 1932, Mrs. Wirth returned to school, this time in Richmond, where she attended classes in social work at Richmond Professional Institute and trained for religious education work at the Presbyterian School of Christian Education. Following this training, she was employed in the Johnston County (N.C.) Welfare Department for several years. She also served as Director of Home Missions for Granville Presbytery and as Director of Christian Education at Trinity and Laurel Street Methodist churches in Richmond. She was educational director at the First Vanguard Presbyterian Church in Raleigh when she retired in 1950.

At her death she was an active member of the White Memorial Presbyterian Church, the Caswell-Nash Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the American Legion Auxiliary, and the Raleigh Woman's Club in the city where she made her home for many years.

"No institution was more beloved than the Woman's College where Mrs. Wirth spent happy years as a student, a teacher, and an alumna, serving several years on the Alumnae Board of Trustees. She kept this tie with her alma mater through fruitful years of service in varied fields. Whenever possible, she returned to the campus for special events and reunions, but wherever she went, she proudly told college-age girls of the fine opportunities offered by the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina."

In mid-December Mrs. Nancy Reynolds Verney and Mr. Richard J. Reynolds, Jr., the children of Mrs. R. J. Reynolds, Sr., established through the Z. Smith Reynolds Foundation the largest scholarship program which the Woman's College has ever had. To be known as Katharine Smith Reynolds Scholars, the recipients of the scholarships, which will annually number twelve, will each receive $1200 for each of their four college years if their academic achievement indicates annual renewal. The first Reynolds Scholars will be freshmen next year (1963-1964).

Mrs. Reynolds, who died in 1924, was a student at the College from 1897 until 1900. She withdrew from college because of a typhoid fever epidemic, and she completed the final year's work for her bachelor of arts degree at Sullins College in Virginia. Following her graduation she taught art in Mount Airy, her home town.

In 1905 she was married to Mr. Reynolds of Winston-Salem and until his death, she advised with him on business and community betterment. It was she who persuaded him to shorten the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company's work week from six to five and a half days. She was responsible for the establishment of the company's Medical Department and of cafeterias for the employees. She organized a Day Nursery for the children of workers. She was responsible for the final version of the caption on the Camel cigarette package.

In the community, Mrs. Reynolds was instrumental in starting the YWCA in Winston-Salem, and she served as chairman of its Building Committee. She was the person most responsible for the construction of the R. J. Reynolds High School in Winston-Salem, and she gave the money for the auditorium. When she found that many men on the Reynolds' estate could not read or write, night classes were organized to remedy this situation.

"Through her entire life Mrs. Reynolds implemented the vision of the founder and early students and faculty of the Woman's College, who chose SERVICE as their watchword and goal."

The following letter, addressed to the president of the Alumnae Association, was written during March by an alumna of the College.

Dear Mrs. Holderness,

I have received the material of the Alumnae Annual Giving Council for 1962-63. I am not in a position to make a contribution of importance now. But I am very interested in the possibility at my death of setting up several small scholarships. I need some advice. I own five houses which at the very least (possibly more) should sell for $8,000 each, bringing in at least $30,000 (allowing for drop in real estate). Should I write a will asking that the property be sold at my death, the money placed in a building and loan association, and the interest to be used to establish 2 scholarships? It seems like a small sum of money, but I have no near relatives, and I would like for some girls to have the same chance I had at Woman's College.

I would appreciate "your thinking" on this subject if you consider it worthwhile.

There was no question as to the worthwhileness of this alumna's plan. Information as to the "mechanics" of writing her will has been given to her by the College's Office of Development. The desire for girls in the future to have the same chance she had at the College in the past will translate this alumna's estate, as it did Mrs. Wirth's bequest, into everlasting meaning and value. An investment in scholarships is never-ending.

Old Guard

DR. LEE RIGSBY, dean of the School of Music at the Woman's College, was the speaker for this year's meeting of the Old Guard, which was held in the Wade R. Brown Music Building on Saturday, June 1. May (Lovelace) Tomlinson '07, president of the Old Guard for 1963, introduced Dr. Rigby, who showed the group the music facilities, told them something of the work which the music faculty and students are doing, and presented a student, Mary Ida Hodge, who was graduated with highest honors on Sunday following the meeting. Mary Ida presented a short program for the group's enjoyment.

The late Harriet Morehead Berry was honored posthumously on October 25 when a plaque in the State Highway Building on Capitol Square in Raleigh was dedicated to her memory and to her service as "The Mother of Good Roads in North Carolina." Governor of the State Terry Sanford accepted the plaque which was presented by General Paul Younts, State Highway Commissioner. The plaque reads: "Having been connected with the North Carolina Good Roads Association from its inception in 1902, she emerged as its dedicated and resourceful leader. She wrote and publicized throughout the state a basic road bill that won enthusiastic support and was adopted by the Legislature as the 1921 State Highway Act. This act, a model for other states and nations, authorized the State Highway Commission to build and maintain a state highway system, which by later enabling acts became the largest system of state owned and maintained travel arteries in the nation, and has been a dominant factor in the progress of North Carolina. SHE LOVED HER STATE AND SERVED IT WELL." Among the numerous quotations about her and her work which were printed in the program for the occasion is this one from the Raleigh Evening Times, dated February 28, 1921: "... to her, more than any one person or group of persons is due the thanks of those who desire to bring North Carolina out of the mud." Harriet's great-nephew, John Berry VI, and her sister, Margaret (Berry) Street '12, were among the members of her family who figured in the dedication ceremony. Harriet died in 1940.

1963 reunion report

TWENTY-TWO members of the Class of 1913 returned to the campus of the Woman's College for Alumnae Day and their fiftieth reunion.

They began arriving Friday afternoon, and that evening there were many at the Alumnae House for a social hour and greeting.

There was a lecture on Saturday morning in Elliott Hall.

The Class were honor guests at the Alumnae Luncheon in Coleman Gymnasium at noon. A white carnation tied with blue and white ribbons was presented to each member of 1913 by the Alumnae Association. A class booklet was prepared by the Alumnae Office and presented to each member by the Association. It is attractive and contains much interesting information about the class members. For each member there was a light blue felt four-leaf-clover with the dates '13 and '63 and with a miniature gilded slipper charm attached. These were the work and gift of Mary Tennent, who was our Reunion Luncheon Hostess.

Following the luncheon a class meeting was held in the living room of Coit Hall, with Verta (Idol) Coe presiding. Here we heard more interesting news about our classmates. Many of the class hope to attend their next reunion in 1964 as members of the Old Guard. Reporter: Rachel (Lynch) Simpson.

 Iris (Holt) McEwen was selected as Alamance County's Woman-of-the-Year for 1962. The award is presented annually by the Burlington Civitan Club for outstanding community service. Iris was cited for her work with many civic and church organizations and particularly the Girl Scouts organization. The list of activities which supported her selection was overwhelming. Said Mr. Harvey Mitchell in making the presentation: "I cannot find words of praise which would make the record of this charming and gracious lady sound more impressive than the facts which speak so well for themselves. Her interest in our community has been so diversified that it would be difficult to point to a single organization or institution as the chief beneficiary of her services."

She has also recently been commissioned a Kentucky Colonel by the Governor of Kentucky, Bert Combs.

 Annie Bostian was selected as Salisbury's Woman of the Year for 1963. In making the presentation the Business and Professional Women's Club recognized her as "an institution in (the) town, not only doing herself but inspiring others to do with her infectious enthusiasm." Best known for her work with the schools, Annie retired in 1957, having spent 42 years working with children in Salisbury. She taught at all four of the city's elementary schools and served as principal at three of them. Hers was a pioneer role in the development of the "soup kitchens" which preceded school cafeterias and in the development of school libraries. Outstanding among the many civic, church, educational, and fraternal services which she performs for her community is her service at the Veterans Hospital. As a volunteer she writes passes, gives educational therapy, works with psychological testing and with the hospital's Alcoholics Anonymous chapter, and teaches a Sunday School class. Among her "in additions" she tape-records a weekly Sunday School lesson for a local radio station.

 Ruby (Siske) Gouge was named "Woman of the Week" (September 10) by The Asheville Citizen. Past-principal of Gouge Elementary School in Bakersville, named in her honor, she has been Mitchell County School supervisor for the past 12 years. She was instrumental in establishing Mitchell County Public Libraries; she serves on the Libraries' board; and she is in charge of the selection of the Libraries' books. Active in the founding of the North Carolina organization of Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary teachers society, she is a past-president of the Asheville and Marion chapters.

Adelaide (VanNoppen) Howard's husband, Dr. George Howard, retired at the end of the school year from the education department of the University of Alabama.

FORTY-TWO YEARS had passed — but you would never have believed it. Talk was fast and furious—everyone was eager to hear about everyone else. A roll call gave a good chance to hear what anyone knew about the absent members.

That wedding bells would ring for one member soon was one exciting bit of news.

A letter from Carrie Bell Ross Gardner from Panama and a telegram from Blance Plott from Lumberton were read.

Plans were made to make the reunion in 1968 the best ever.

Two of the members who were present had to leave before the picture-taking: Lula Martin (Mclver) Dickinson and Katherine Millsaps. Reporter: Mildred (Barrington) Poole.

 During August Frances (Ennis) Dalton was named "The High Pointer of the Week" for High Point where she lives at 1048 Rockford Road. She has been active in P-TA, Girl Scouts, the High Point League of Women Voters, the YWCA, the United Fund, and numerous other organizations, local, state, and national. In 1958-1959 she was listed into WHO'S WHO AMONG AMERICAN WOMEN.

 Juanita (Kesler) Henry served as chairman for the first Public Affairs Conference sponsored by the North Carolina Council of Women's Organizations. Termed by the press as "a smorgasbord of learning," the conference was held at the Woman's College last fall and attended by some 100 delegates. Speakers for the one-day affair were twelve North Carolinians prominent in the fields of education, government, welfare, health, the arts, urban and rural development, whose subjects were deliberately unrelated so as to acquaint the delegates with a number of issues presently facing North Carolina.

THE CLASS OF 1923 held its Fortieth Reunion on Saturday, June 1, as a part of the Commencement activities at the College, with a varying number of members present. At the luncheon count there were 28 present, but some had been there for the morning meeting and had to leave, and one or two came in the afternoon after lunch. So in round numbers there were 30, a goodly group from the 113 members of the Class now living.

Members of the Class were cognizant of the importance of the year for them, not only as the 40th anniversary, which had been anticipated by the Class Prophecy in the PINE NEEDLES of their graduating year, but also as being the class that spanned exactly two name-changes for the College. The Class of 1923 entered as freshmen in the Fall of 1919, the first year that the College bore the name "North Carolina College for Women." It celebrated its 40th anniversary only a month before the Woman's College of the University of North Carolina would become the University of North Carolina at Greensboro.

The Class also took note, at its meeting in the Pecky Cypress Room in the Alumnae House following lunch, that it was in the summer following our freshman year (August 1920) that the Nineteenth Amendment was passed, and so for three years we were indoctrinated by Miss Harriet Elliott into our role as citizens. There was much discussion by the Class, and many reminiscences and reminders of what members of the Class had done to fulfill this role.

Prior to the Reunion, questionnaires had been sent out from the Alumnae Office, and the results of these were put into a booklet entitled "1923 in 1963." A photographic reproduction of the Class Prophecy from THE 1923 PINE NEEDLES, written for the 40th reunion, was included, and a number of statistics about class members.

A discussion of the Annual Giving program at the College and of the Alumnae Scholarships that have been given for two years sparked the establishment of a Memorial Fund for the twelve deceased members of the Class. In the future, when members of the Class die, donations will be made to the Fund instead of sending flowers or telegrams.

Virginia (Terrell) Lathrop, everlasting president of the Class, urged all members who had not filled out the Questionnaire to do so immediately. If enough replies came in to make it worthwhile, she will use them as the basis for an article in THE ALUMNAE NEWS.

The reunion celebration started Friday night with the reception at the Alumnae House. May (Shearer) Stringfield and Lola Parker were on hand to greet the evening arrivals in the Virginia Dare Room where registration tables were set-up, and members of the faculty were pouring punch and coffee. Next morning there was a lecture period in the Alexander Room in Elliott Hall where all alumnae were invited to hear Chancellor Otis Singletary and Mr. George Hamer, director of development, talk about the changes and future of the College.

At noon the members of the Class gathered at a beautiful luncheon table in Coleman Gymnasium to join other reunion-ing classes and friends for a delicious buffet and for the Alumnae meeting afterward. Mrs. Julius Foust, Miss Florence Schaeffer, and Miss Marjorie Hood were invited to have lunch with 1923. Kathleen (Pettit) Hawkins had arranged the tables with red roses at each place. She had made them of silk, and members of the Class were happy to have them, with the attractive red circle pins attached to the name cards, as souvenirs of a happy occasion.

At the class meeting later in the Pecky Cypress Room, the class expressed the desire to have an annual letter about classmates. Virginia Lathrop agreed to write one, providing everyone writes to her and sends news. A picture was taken at the meeting—not one but several—for posterity. Ann Little Masemore had trouble getting everyone in, so she took hers in sections. Some of you may get one end of the class, and some the other, but regardless, you will be amazed to see how trim, good-looking, fashionable all the '23's looked. Lola Parker's white hair was so chic! And Lizzie (Whitley) Dill, who came the greatest distance, from Pennsylvania, had the same contagious smile, enhanced by the years!

As always, 1923 was there when needed. Elizabeth (Fulton) VanNoppen rallied to the call to play The College Song for the Alumnae meeting, and who but Mollie (Matheson) Calder joined her to lead the Faithful 500 in singing it.

There was talk of husbands, children, grandchildren, and retirement, of course, but most of the talk was what those busy, happy members of the Class of 1923 plan to do in the coming years! Reporter: Virginia (Terrell) Lathrop.

Margaret (Bedell) Spivak, listed among the "lost" in the class, is living at Gaylord Hotel, 3355 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 5, Calif.

Alma Kerr (Blount) Longman, K-3B Emerywood Court, High Point. A widow since 1955, she is now a school librarian. Her late husband was a lawyer in Canada, where they made their home for several years.

Octavia (Clegg) Waters, P. O. Box 326, Elliottville, N. Y. Octavia is a librarian and her husband is a Methodist minister. They have three children: James, who has an M.A. in Organ from Princeton, and is now an instructor at Westminster Choir College; Marie, assistant dean of women, Radford College, Radford, Va.; and Margaret, secretary to Dean of Music at the Westminster Choir College in Princeton, N. J.

Dorothy Clement is Dean of Women, Keystone Junior College, La Plume, Penna. Eleanor (Hill) Smith, Kingston, is state secretary of the Christian Women's Fellowship of the Christian (Disciples of Christ) Church. Her headquarters are in Kingston, but she travels throughout the state.

Helen Hudnell who has taught in Europe for the last six years will teach in Greensboro this fall.

Anna C. Johnson's address is 1905 Park Drive, Raleigh.

Agnes (Jones) Penny, 250 Roberta Road, Concord. Agnes is the wife of a Methodist minister. They have three children: Mrs. Paul W. Yount, Jr., whose husband is Director of Missionary Orientation Center for six denominations at Stoney Point, N. Y.; William E. Penny, Mutual Insurance, Hendersonville; and Robert Lynn Penny, on teaching fellowship, studying for Ph.D. at the University of Alabama. While they had three children in college, Agnes taught for four years, but has resumed her role of a minister's wife and homemaker.

Jessie (Redwine) Huskey, 601 Oakshade Avenue, Kannapolis. For more than thirty years Jessie has taught a first grade. The Huskey's only daughter is in her sixth year of teaching math and science.

Dr. Mabel F. Rudisill, associate professor in the Department of Education at Duke University, Durham, was recently speaker for the Durham branch of the AAUW. Mabel, a specialist in the field of elementary reading, spoke on "Research in Beginning Reading."

In April the Bobbs-Merrill Company published a new book for children by Julia (Montgomery) Street: DULCIE'S WHALE. As has always been the case in her books, the setting for this one is in North Carolina: the Outer Banks area during World War I.

Pearl (Taylor) Irvin, Greensboro, has a new grandson, John Lafayette, Jr., born in August to Pearl's son and his wife, John, Sr., who received a dental degree at the University of North Carolina, where he also taught a year in the school of dentistry, is specializing in orthodontia.

Virginia (Terrell) Lathrop, Asheville, has a second grandson, William Park Lathrop, born October 3 in Albany, N. Y.

Stella (Williams) Anderson has established the Stella Anderson Undergraduate Scholarships, presently numbering two and valued at $250 each, through the Home Economics Foundation at the Woman's College. She is a member of the Foundation's Board of Directors, and she is a member of the University of North Carolina's Board of Trustees. . . . She served as general chairman for this year's annual Leaf Train Excursion on the famous Virginia Creeper from West Jefferson to Abingdon, Va. And she is serving as chairman of the Europe and NATO division of the International Relations Department of the National Federation of Woman's Clubs, by appointment of the president of the Federation.

Matilda (Robinson) Sugg works for the Bureau of Labor Statistics, United States Department of Labor, in Washington. Last fall she was a member of a Labor Delegation to the U. S. Exhibition in Buenos Aires, Argentina. "The assignment to Argentina was interesting and exciting. My job there was to answer questions asked by Argentines about workers in the United States, such things as employment, unemployment, the cost-of-living, wages, and so on. I spoke with hundreds of Argentines and found them friendly and extremely interested in our country. I visited trade unions, lectured at two universities, and met with scores of students and business men. When the Exhibition was over I visited Brazil, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, and Panama, making a complete circle trip around South America."

Annie Lee Singletary was designated as "Girl of the Month" for October by COMMUNIQUE which is published for the employees of the JOURNAL and SENTINEL (newspapers in Winston-Salem) and station WSJS. Faye (Thompson) Williams lives at 2626 Churchill Road, Raleigh.

NAN NORWINE '38, who is assistant food service manager at Ursuline College in Louisville, Kentucky, was determined to attend her class' twenty-fifth reunion at the Woman's College on June 1. Like all colleges at the Commencement season of the year, Ursuline was a busy, hungry place, and Nan could not manage an entire weekend away. She did, though, arrange to have a little "released" time during the day for a trip to Greensboro. On Saturday, the first, she worked from 6:30 until 10:00 in the morning; she boarded a plane in Louisville at 10:25 and arrived at the Greensboro airport at 1:30. The reunion luncheon was over by the time she reached Coleman Gymnasium, but she joined her classmates for a class meeting, and during the afternoon she visited with as many folks on the campus as she could. At 5:00 she returned to the airport for a 5:30 departure back to Louisville. For her, her classmates, and the Woman's College three hours of reunion were far, far better than none.

a large New York bank, a Trustee of the Greater University, and one member who has given twenty-eight years of service to the Woman's College. Those of our group who have taken their place in the business world or in the school systems of the country have learned well the lesson that their college life implanted in their thinking: It is not enough to earn a living; the secret of success is learning how to enjoy it.

The words of Charles D. McIver, "Educate a woman and you educate a family," echoed as we looked back over the past twenty-five years. At the time we were in college, the average American had 1.2 children. Our class has come up with the astounding improvement of 3.5 children per family with the proud boast of one family with ten and another with nine children. Another rather surprising result of our survey of those present for the reunion was the fact that there were more women present who had pre-school children than who had grandchildren—this after 25 years out of college. Over half of those present had children in grammar school; nearly all of those with families had children in junior and senior high schools; and close to 50% had young people in college. We have sent six girls to the Woman's College, and their mothers noted well the number of boys we have sent back to Chapel Hill.

No statement about our classmates would be complete without a few words about the husbands, only one of whom was brave enough to come to our reunion. Many of them were at Chapel Hill attending their own reunion. But a brief roll-call of the husbands indicated that we numbered among them a Cape Canaveral Space Scientist, the circulation manager of a national magazine, many businessmen who own their own businesses, the president of one college and the vice-president of another, and a North Carolina judge.

Perhaps a final word should be added concerning the accuracy of our class prophecy. Our prima donna sang the role of Violetta (Traviata) for a civic opera within one year of the time she had been predicted to do so; our archeologist has returned from her expedition to Egypt; our business executive's wife is settled in her New York home; and our Spanish teacher is improving the accents of Spanish-speaking North Carolinians. In another twenty-five years we may see more of our prophecy come true. Reporter: Georgia (Arnett) Bonds.

ASSOCIATED PRESS reporters Sid Moody and Hugh Mulligan made a nationwide survey of the University of North Carolina's Class of 1938 twenty-five years after graduation. If their survey had included the 223 graduates of the Woman's College in Greensboro, they would have brought to light such interesting features as our good-will ambassadors to Morocco, India, and Jordan; our home designers who have had their homes appear in national magazines for home decorating; and our classmate who has invited us to visit her in her winter home in Jamaica.

The number of career women in the class has been outnumbered by the number of home-makers, but a surprising number have combined home-making with careers. Among our class we count the executive secretary of Bea (Goldman) Fisher, 305 Fisher Drive, Falls Church, Va., homemaking.

Nancy (Idol) White's husband is a lieutenant colonel in the U. S. Navy. They live at 1002 McCurry Place, Honolulu 18, Hawaii.

Ruth (O'Connor) Andrews has three sons and one daughter. Ruth's husband, a major in the Air Force is a command pilot on a B52 bomber, stationed at Amarillo, Texas. Daughter, Judy, is a student at Woman's College. She expects the rest of the family to return to Greensboro next year, when Major Andrews is scheduled to retire from the Service.

Anne Parham is secretary in the Guilford County manager's office, Greensboro, where she has worked for twenty years.

Theo "Petie" (Roberts) Creadick, 15146 Mulholland Drive, Los Angeles 24, Calif. The Creadicks have two children, Christopher 15 and Miranda 12½. "Petie" is working toward a master's degree in library science and her husband is an architect for Douglas Aircraft.

Following a year in India, the John Clark family (Mary Ann Scott) has returned to their home at 24 Morrill Avenue, Waterville, Maine. The Clarks have three children. Their eldest daughter, Alice, is a student at Swarthmore College.

Jean (Smith) Holman's daughter, Nancy

Glazebrook ("Brook"), has been selected as one of the first twelve Katharine Smith Reynolds Scholars at the Woman's College. "Brook," who will be a freshman in the fall, ranked first in the senior class of 550 students at New Hanover High School in Wilmington, N. C.

Jackie (Walser) Plambeck's husband is stationed at the American Embassy in Mexico City, where they are living. Their son, Charles, will soon be 2.

Mildred (Winfree) Roberts teaches in Rockingham.

Next reunion in 1965

The J. M. Glaze family (Helen Ames) has moved from Williamsburg, N. Y., to 821 Nathan Hale Road, Berwyn, Pa. Helen wrote: "During our stay in Williamsburg, we were privileged to have an American Field Service exchange student live with us for the 1962 school year. His name was Takeo Mogami and he and our son John attended high school as seniors and graduated this past June. We enjoyed our Japanese 'son' and, of course, we learned so many things about Japan and feel we can understand an entirely different point of view on so many issues in this world of ours. John is a freshman at Colby College and our two daughters, Carolyn 16 and Martha 14, are in high school."

Because her husband was an avid flyer and pilot, Marie (Brennan) Bullard, 3409 Rockingham Road, Greensboro, learned to fly last year. She declares that flying is a wonderful diversion for just a "housewife."

Carroll (Christensen) Sommerville, 1509 Pigeon Point Road, Beaufort, S. C. Carroll and her five children are making their home with her father.

The Barry Colby family (Betty Dahlin) enjoyed a summer of sailing on a 40 ft. Newport which they keep in Connecticut. The fall, however, found them settled at 746 Laurel Lane, Wayne, Pa., with two boys in the 11th and 9th grades and two girls in the 6th and 3rd grades. Betty is a substitute teacher in the Conestoga High School.

Dorothy Gueth is executive director of the U. S. O., 301 North 8th Street, Richmond 19, Va.

Two Forsyth County women have been named to the 163-member national advisory council of the Reading Reform Foundation. They are: Hilda (Hilton) Mitchell '43 and Sara (Fritz) Lewis, Com. '45. The foundation, organized last October, has as its primary aim the restoration of the phonics method of teaching reading in elementary schools.

Dr. Harriet Kupferer of the Woman's College Department of Sociology and Anthropology will head a field-training research party during the summer for the study of Indians in a remote Hudson Bay area in Canada. The party, organized by the UNC at Chapel Hill Department of Sociology and Anthropology, will have its base at Rupert House on the shore of James Bay, 1,100 miles north of New York. University of North Carolina students will study Indian life and language. The project is financed by the National Institute of Mental Health.

Mary (Leeper) Bower's address is 1912 Bent Road, Williamsport, Penna.

Elizabeth (Newton) Lewis, 8 Oakwood Drive, Woodcliff Lake, N. J. Her husband is with Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in New York City. They have two sons, Matthew 17 and David 15.

Next reunion in 1968

1963 reunion report

Tho your shoes have gotten pointy now,

And you've gone from 'teen to thirty,
Think back upon an earlier year

When your saddle shoes were dirty!

We're powerful glad that you could come—

No class was ever finer.

Laugh and leave all your years behind.

Today, you're a '49er!!!

THIS EPIC POEM, probably penned by Mot (Guion) Meredith, reunion luncheon chairman, did really express the mood of the twenty-nine members of the Class of 1949 who returned to celebrate fourteen years of survival since graduation. Six girls made a big weekend of it and spent the night on campus. The others congregated for the luncheon, Alumnae meeting and class picture-taking.

Conversation was lively and covered items about absent members (you should have come because we talked about YOU!), children, changes of residence, occupations, children, changes on campus, husbands and children. There were children's pictures galore, and Nancy Beam (Funderburk) Wells even brought her four-year-old (older of two boys) to the Coffee Hour after registration. It seems that Chris (Foil) Johnston (who is as funny as ever) has five young'uns, Mot (Guion) Meredith has five and so does Lois Jean (Thomas) Griffiths. Honors for four went to Viola (Entermillie) Parrish, who flew down from Maryland; to Mary Frances (Hamrick) Schaffert, who left four boys in the hills of Asheville to come; and to Rachel (Hartgrove) Shackelford, who lives in Greensboro and had a chic new hair-do.

The unofficial opinion was that Johnnie (Moore) Dickson (not Nixon, she insisted) was the most beautiful '49er there. She looked just gorgeous! She had driven over the mountains from Tennessee. She has two sons.

Sarah (Taylor) Conrad knew that she was still at home on the W. C. campus when she heard some of her former inmates of Woman's Hall holler: "Hey, S. T.!" She lives in Lexington. Celeste (Orr) Prince drove up from Clemson where she and Phil and two sons still support the Tigers almost full time. She was sporting a red Triumph, no less.

Greensboro girls who formed the luncheon and hostess committees included Jane (Davis) Lambert, Esther (Bagwell) Mathews, Jean (Morgan) Watson and Lib (Sydnor) Boone. These girls did a good job! Martha (Fowler) McNear always did know how to appoint committees and get things done. Bless her! She was there in good form and the news about her daughter, Elizabeth, is good. Mac (McCullum) Moore was over from Reidsville where she had left her three sons and her dentist husband.

Barbara (Apostolacus) Lipscomb is now on the way to Cairo for three years. She had some wonderful color pictures that her husband had taken on his travels for the Ford Foundation. Mary Lib (Smith) Blackwell said that she did not have any glamorous trips or jobs to describe but that she and her three were glad to be in Lenoir, N. C.

Barbara (Duval) Myers lives in Waxhaw and has no grey hair. Jean (Fulcher) Fesperman has three children and has recently moved to Burlington where her husband is in charge of the YWCA. Frances (Glenn) McCullen lives in Camer. Janet (Jones) Banzhof lives in Winston-Salem and has one little boy. Elizabeth (Craybeal) McRimmon lives in Greensboro.

Marianne (Niven) Belk had come up from Monroe. She has two children and is secretary to the president of one of the banks there. Ruth (Park) Crowder lives in Greensboro. Jean (Proffitt) Weyand lives in Durham and has two children. Lib (Trollinger) Boyles still lives in Mt. Airy. Evelyn (Vannoy) Little came down all the way from West Jefferson. Ann (White) Dellinger now lives in Gastonia. Antigone Pearl McCorkle and Status Quo Muddeford are still teaching third grade at Cantalope Junction and are unchanged by the years.

The lack of specific information about some of these '49ers is due to limitations of time and the recollection of only one set of ears. There was more going on than anyone could believe.

The Class of 1949 was justly proud of its contribution to the Alumnae Annual Giving Program. We placed third in number of donors and also in the amount given. Ninety members gave $531, for an average of $9.23. Could more of you answer your letters . . . yes?

The reunion group had messages from the following members who could not be present: Nan (Kendall) Wiles, Jan Shore, Pete (Regner) Shrode, Nina (Teague) Lineberry.

Betsy (Tolleson) Mauney, Frances (Ferguson) Brinkley, Betty (Wincoff) Phillips, Nancy Hill Campbell, Joyce (Parker) Jones, Betty Umstead, and Ellen (Tucker) Lyon.

Our class advisor, Dr. Virginia Gangstad, has become one of the most outstanding exponents of modern Japanese flower arranging in this area. She was eagerly anticipating going to Washington, D. C., in June to attend lectures by the noted Japanese master, Houn O Hara. Reporter: Beam Funderburk Wells.

The Pixie Playhouse, a new organization formed by the children's theater of The Greensboro Junior League and the Theater of Woman's College, offered three productions to the children of this area this year. Marian (Adams) Smith is children's theater chairman for the league.

Barbara (Apostolacus) Lipscomb's husband, Jim, has joined the staff of The Ford Foundation and will become its representative in the U. A. R. on January 1, 1964. "We are terribly excited over this extremely interesting and challenging new job (from July 1, 1963 on we may be reached at The Ford Foundation, P. O. Box 2344, Cairo, U. A. R.).

In recent years about 25% ($53,000,000 in 1962) of the income grants of The Foundation have been made overseas and there are now ten representatives who are concerned with this aspect of The Foundation's work." The family has lived for the past two years in Wellesley Hills, Mass., where Jim was on the staff of the Harvard University Graduate School of Business Administration.

Arlene (Batchker) Dellis is registrar for the Guggenheim Museum, New York.

Mary Margaret Patrick to George Walton Fields, February 17, Charlotte. George is an alumnus of State College, Raleigh, and is now with Dealer's Supply Company. At home, Charlotte.

Betty Ray (Poplin) Harris, Route 1, Indian Trail. Betty Ray has one daughter, Joyce Ann 11. Her husband died in 1959 and she is now assistant buyer for J. B. Ivey & Co. in Charlotte.

Dr. Mary Anne Raywid, chairman of educational foundations and student teaching at Hofstra College, Hempstead, N. Y., has been promoted to the rank of associate professor. Dr. Raywid earned her master's degree in 1950 and her doctorate of philosophy in 1959 from the University of Illinois where she was also a University fellow during her last year. She is the author of "The Ax Grinders," a book about critics of education published by Macmillan last spring.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Irwin Rubenstein (Estelle Rose), a daughter, Ellen, July 30, Guayaquil, Ecuador. Mr. Rubenstein for two years worked in Ecuador as Labor Education Advisor with the Point 4 program. They are now in the United States on leave.

1963 reunion report

THE CLASS OF 1953 found its reunion weekend too short; but as Sue (Martin) Mayer predicted, we left W. C. with many memories to savor. More than one hundred of us returned after ten years. We greeted and laughed, exclaimed and laughed, remembered and laughed, caught-up and laughed.

We held house meetings and noted that they were about as orderly as ever.

Directed by Lois (Melver) Winstead and Rozelle (Royall) Wicks, we sang songs from the junior and senior shows and were amazed at our harmony.

We awarded an orchid, a used one of Juanita (Smith) Hendrix's, to: Helen (Hawfield) Stephens, who came the long distance from Venezuela; Mary Anna (Peck) Dunn, who has five lovely children; Jane (Cragan) Cowell, who brought her class jacket intact; Lois (Nelson) Saunders, who stayed awake the longest; Marion (Sifford) Miller, who generally merits one; and finally to Edith (Rawley) Sifford, who promised to keep it everlastingly.

We posed for a picture for THE ALUMNAE NEWS and refused to interrupt visiting to identify ourselves for the caption.

We read letters and telegrams from Carolyn (Junker) Yewell, Gloria (Smith) Westinger, Sue (Causby) Pigg, Ann (Darlington) Thomas, Caroline (Crews) Thomas, Sylvia (Kanter) Kaler, among others, called Margie (Mitchell) Davis (collect) and regretted the absence of all who could not come.

We discussed favorite courses and were pleased to see members of the faculty and administration.

We were happy to be joined by Miss Cunningham and Miss Davis and realized anew our good fortune at having them for sponsors.

We were proud that our class led in the number of donors to the Alumnae Annual Giving Program and collected $53 more to show that even the best could be improved upon.

We were grateful to the staff in the Alumnae Office and to the girls from Greensboro, headed by JoAnne (Fuller) Black and Mary Lou Johnson, for the well-organized and gracious program arrangements.

And we found, perhaps with warmest pleasure, that the changes in our College and in ourselves are undergirded with something that is unchanging. We found that "it is [still] here in our hearts . . ."

Until 1967 . . .

1963 reunion report

THE FIFTH REUNION meeting of the Class of 1955 was called to order at 2:30 on the afternoon of June 1 in Cotten Hall by Meetta (Carlton) Lampert, everlasting secretary. First on the meeting's agenda was a message from Kuck (White) Raiford, everlasting president, who was unable to attend the reunion.

The official thanks and appreciation of the class were extended to Barbara (Funderburk) Giles, who as class Luncheon Hostess took care of arrangements for the occasion at which about 35 members of the class were present.

The minutes of our previous meeting were read by Sarah Shuping. After exchanging information on recent events in our lives and sharing news of classmates who were absent, the meeting was adjourned. Reporter: Gail Steacy.

The following "poetic message" to the Class of 1955 was received after the class meeting had been adjourned.

"Heartiest greetings to the girls in green!
That it's been five years is plainly seen.
The years rush by so terribly fast,
Do you suppose our superb knowledge will last?

"How do you look?—each lucky one
Who returned to campus for days of fun;
And how do you talk? each dear friend
Whose long silence I'd like to amend.
"Have you mints of money all your own?
Or have you children you'd like to loan?
Is it a swank apartment or mortgaged house

That you've made home with maybe a spouse?

"These five years have been busy for me:
Years one, two, three Neil earned a degree
In law at Duke while I taught English
To pay those bills was our only wish.
"Soon came Freddy in June of '59.
It was hard to believe that he was mine;
He grew and grew, looking more like Neil
Then we moved to Atlanta to quite a deal.
"There Neil practiced law while I taught again.

This time history and hard study began.
Such dual employment lasted only a year
For then a house and baby were near.
"In '63 came Susan—a mere four pounds
But now her praises ringingly resound,
And the house is a charmer—white fence and all.

Is there a valid reason you can't come to call?

"My sincere good wishes to each of you;
I'm green with envy wishing I was there too.
Please do write; I'll include my address,
And to one and all—my very best."
Address: 816 Channing Place, N. W., Atlanta 18, Georgia.

We missed YOU who couldn't be there, and if you felt your ears burning in the wee hours of Saturday morning, it was just your '61 classmates catching up on all of the news of those in absentia. Better be there in '66 to speak up for yourselves!

About thirteen of us arrived on campus Friday. We stayed in Jamison with "Miss C" and felt right at home on those soft WC cots. Friday saw us marveling over the new soda shop-restaurant in Elliott Hall and its "WC Specialty" catching up on campus doings of the last two years at an informal party with our graduating Sister Class, wondering what the girls on the eighth floor of the new dorm will do should the elevator go on the blink, talking on the phone with "Punt" in Alaska who sent greetings to everyone and who hopes to be home this winter, and just enjoying being together again.

Saturday morning we could be found in Elliott Hall at the Coffee Hour and the Alumnae Lecture at which Chancellor Singleton and Mr. George Hamer, director of development, spoke on the present and future status of the College. At the luncheon meeting of the Alumnae Association, we once again sang The College Song and heard first-hand reports of the Alumnae Annual Giving Fund and came to realize how much this money will mean in terms of scholarships to the girls who will receive them. We hope you'll continue to support this Fund and increase your contributions whenever possible.

Our class meeting in Melver Lounge in Elliott Hall at which President Em Herring presided was most informal. We discussed plans for the reunion in '66 and the possibility of trying to keep class members informed of important happenings involving the school, i.e., the College acquiring university status, etc. We hope to get out more information about locations of class members before the '66 reunion so that groups of '61ers may journey to Greensboro together and perhaps boost attendance.

We would like to give you all the news that we heard over the weekend, but it's just impossible to include everything. Here are a few items that did not appear in the booklet and some messages from those who couldn't attend:

Mary Alice Carson sent her regards to everyone and regrets that plans for her forthcoming marriage kept her away.

Daphne (Wingate) Skidmore and Peggy Richardson asked to be remembered to all of their WC friends and were sorry that a husband returning from a lengthy cruise with the Navy and distance kept them away.

Hannah (Abernathy) Widder has returned from Okinawa and is living at 7-B Sunchon Road, Fort Bragg, N. C.

1963 reunion report

TO THE '61ERS: Recognize the faces in the picture? These are the girls who tore themselves away from babies, kitchens, and jobs to shoot the breeze, listen to plans for the College for the coming years—beg your pardon, the University—and just be a part of the campus again. We did have a few

A FUND in memory of Miss Annie Petty, who died in Greensboro on December 7, 1962, has been established through the Friends of the Woman's College Library.

"Miss Annie" was distinguished as "the first trained librarian in North Carolina." She joined Dr. McIver's staff at the Normal and Industrial School in 1896. She was called "the librarian," but she was really a general utility person. There were few books in the library except textbooks, and these she checked out to the students between receiving and sorting mail, signing for express, and ringing bells for classes every 40 minutes.

In 1898 she took a year's leave of absence and went to the Drexel Library School of Drexel Institute. She returned to the College at the end of the year, the only member of her class who went straight into a position.

Through Dr. McIver's efforts, a Carnegie grant was obtained, the first given to a college library. In 1906, with the $25,000 grant, a library building was constructed, and this, in time, was expanded. With one trained assistant and student help, Miss Petty made this library the hub of the campus.

She left the College in 1921 to go to Raleigh where for twelve years she was assistant secretary of the State Library Commission. With her special interest in the field of reference libraries, it was with real pride that she saw the realization of her dream for a Bookmobile. With her nephew at the wheel, she took the first bookmobile out in North Carolina.

Contributions to Miss Petty's memorial fund, so designated, may be sent to Mr. Charles Adams, Woman's College Librarian and the secretary of the Friends of the Library.

A LETTER

If you have ever doubted the value of your gift to the Alumnae Annual Giving Fund, please read this letter. It is from one of the four freshmen who were awarded the first of our Alumnae Scholars scholarships.

Bailey Hall
May 27, 1963

Dear Alumnae of Woman's College:

*"I am a stander-in-line; signer of last name, first name, middle initial;
wearer of dink; receiver of chair, desk, bed, and dream—a freshman."*

These words greeted me to Woman's College. When I read that passage, I did not fully realize the extensiveness of this thing called college.

This thing called college . . . Just what is it? Orientation Week was a ponderance of this question for me as well as over one thousand other freshmen. By now, most of us know the answer. For me, it was a big city—bigger than I had ever known—and having 145 sisters instead of one. It was a discovery of ideas, of teachers who, for the most part, taught instead of merely receiving a paycheck every month. It was the discovery of Mr. Randall Jarrell's poetry: "When the roads leave here they're lost, the signs in the country can't think of what to say." It was blind-dates and week-ends and foreign films at the Cinema. It was the good with the bad. It was the slide of the cross-section of a root that I could never understand . . . the making and breaking of friends . . . the long, long wait to register . . . the seemingly utter despair of an already-filled section . . . the gloomy days followed by sun-filled days.

And college was a scholarship . . . faith in what you had done . . . and faith in what you were capable of doing . . . and success . . . and renewal for next year.

Because this, and much more, is college, I wish to thank you for the renewal of my scholarship for next year. I also wish to thank you for your gift to me—my freshman year.

Sincerely,
